

ACS Undergraduate Award in Analytical Chemistry

Each year, the Analytical Division of Chemistry and Biochemistry selects an undergraduate who has excelled in the area of analytical chemistry and shows great potential as a future analytical chemist to receive the ACS Undergraduate Award in Analytical Chemistry.

The student selected receives the Journal of Analytical Chemistry and is awarded a certificate of recognition signed by the Chairman of the Division and Editor of Analytical Chemistry.

To be eligible, all award candidates must have completed CHEM 325/326 during their third year as an undergraduate and must be enrolled at University of Arizona in chemistry for the next academic year.

Recent winners include:

- Emily Moore; 2008
- John Keogh; 2006
- Margo Ellis; 2005
- Alison Ange; 2004
- Ryan Hernandez; 2003
